Gaborone is the capital of Botswana and has a population of 300 000. The name comes from a great chief, Batlokwa, who died in 1932. Today it is nicknamed the "White City", although this doesn't correspond very well to the city, as it is quite polluted and not necessarily a tourist attraction. However it is situated at the extreme southeast of the country on the border with South Africa, making it a good place to rent your camping car.

A departure from Gaborone will allow you to explore the magnificent natural reserves in Botswana, after which you can descend to Johannesburg and discover the treasures of South Africa.
